CLEVELAND'S BOOM REVIVES.

The Cleveland boom for president is being revived, as shown from this bit of correspondence from Washington City, where the "wise men" politically are ever in evidence:

"The Cleveland boom is peculiar. It had a short lining during the winter; then died out completely. Cleveland was out in a declaration that he did not seek the nomination and was not a candidate. For many weeks the public took him at his word. But the boom has reappeared, and no one is more responsible for its revival than Mr. Cleveland himself. In the past few weeks the ex-President has appeared in print a number of times, defending various acts of his two administrations, and denying charges that had been made against him by men in his own party. The very fact that Mr. Cleveland has suddenly deemed it necessary to defend his former administrations, and to make note of attacks that have gone unnoticed in the past seven years, is believed to indicate more than a mere desire of the man from Princeton to "set himself right."

The nomination of this "has been" would be an awful blow to the Old Guards of Democracy in this county, who but recently in convention here, openly denounced him and his kind. It would be interesting to read their retraction, and especially to see how they would shew their own words.

In its prejudiced review, the organ of the little Democratic court house ring rails to describe conditions as they existed under Democratic rule in this county. It does not say anything about the illicit places of booze and vice. It says nothing about the terrible financial condition of the county, when the order-shaving system was in vogue to such an extent that one could not get money due him from the county, unless he shared it with a money shark, who in turn shared it with officials. It says nothing about certain Democratic persons who are now trying to get control of county affairs, approaching Republican sheriffs with a proposition to do the shaving and divide with them. It passes over this, when it is indulging itself in telling what grand and glorious things Democracy would work for the county, if it were to get hold of the reins of government fully. Perhaps, it thinks that would be good for the people, just as that party used to think. The fact remains nevertheless that one of the Republican sheriffs was approached by a prominent Democrat, who is now actively engaged in the policies of his party, on that very proposition, but that Republican sheriff like all other Republican sheriffs the county has had treated the proposition with contempt and looked with scorn on the one who proposed it. Not having the power to refrain from the old habit then, when a Republican was in that office, what would such a man do with his party in control of the office? Any school boy would naturally conclude that he would get his habits on good and strong, and then would the notorious county-shaving system be in full blast again to the eminent satisfaction of the little Democratic clique, which is longing to get hold of the offices of the county. Another review should come from the News at once. It should not forget all these matters of history, while it is trying to impress the people with its aspirations to be a historian.

The Ohio Republicans in state convention adopted a platform that exemplifies the late Senator Hanna's wholesome advice, "Stand pat." That they propose to follow and uphold the principles of the Republican party as they have been enunciated and observed the past several years, no one doubts, who reads their platform this year. They declare in no uncertain terms their belief in those principles and they have not minced words or tried to cover up any thing with high sounding phrases, but to the contrary they have spoken plainly and no one who reads need misunderstand. The platform is just such a one as Senator Hanna himself would have as one as Senator Hanna himself would have more than likely have advised, if he had been among the living. It reaffirms the national and state platforms, and is the keynote of the campaign both in the state and nation, and both have won brilliant victories on those platforms. On the other hand the Democratic platform in Ohio in the last state campaign endorsed as it was by the national Democracy generally, was repudiated by the people, and it is necessary for them in Ohio to get up another to go before the people on. When that is done, the national Democracy will also have to switch about and endorse Ohio's new platform and by the act confess to the nation that it has not the ability to form a platform that will stand the test. Furthermore, it must also concede that it has no fixed principles and no record on which it may go squarely and honestly before the people. The Ohio situation truly sizes up the national and illustrates clearly the strength of the Republican party in sound judgment, good principles, honest convictions and capable government, while on the Democratic side it shows that party's weakness in judgment, convictions, government and record.

Of all the inconsistencies one ever heard of it is the course of the News. Its wind power talks on the trust question about "prosecutions by Roosevelt," and in the same paving tries to say William Randolph Hearst did it. Suppose he did. The Democratic sheet then differs from its party in West Virginia or puts it in a bad light, because of the fact that Hearst has been practically repudiated by them, receiving only two delegates out of fourteen. If the News would look around a little and sound the sentiment among some of the Democrats who are now trying to run its party in this state, it might find that the reason they repudiated Hearst was because of his claim that he prosecuted the trusts, and it might also tell the people that that turn-down of him is a strong and convincing evidence that they approve the course of the Democratic members of the United States Supreme Court in not voting to sustain the prosecution of the Northern Securities, which is claimed to be a terrible menace to the country.

Women will bow their heads in the dust to the idol of fashion. Some of them care more for what they have on their backs than they do for what they have in their heads. We have heard in the present time and read in history from the beginning of events how the eternal feminine will submit to the most excruciating physical pain all for fashion's sake. Miss Pauline Littlestone, of Braddock, Pa., broke her arm three times within the past six months trying to fasten a shirt waist which fashion said must be buttoned up the back in a certain way. Miss Littlestone was a society devotee and one of the worshippers at the fashion shrine. The third time she broke her arm was the last straw and she began to come to her senses. Hereafter Miss Littlestone will allow fashion's mandate to go by the board and will dress for her own comfort and ease as all women who have a grain of sense left in their noddles should do.

There is not the shadow of a doubt but that Theodore Roosevelt will be the Republican nominee for the presidency this fall. Recently we gave figures which showed that his nomination was a foregone conclusion. The returns up to date show in reality that Roosevelt will be the nominee. Of the states that have elected delegates to the Republican national convention 520 have been instructed to vote for Roosevelt. Delegates elected "uninstructed" number 124. There will be 988 votes in the Chicago convention and 495 are sufficient to nominate. Under these circumstances there is simply nothing to do but to make his nomination by acclamation.

A local daily paper flashes these words on its readers: "Our telegraphic news service is the most complete," and by a casual examination of that service, it is found that it is taken mostly, if not altogether, from the Wheeling papers, which reach here at least eight hours before its hour of publication, and then its so-called dispatches are dated up a day. That is what the average man calls yesterday's news to-day, but it calls it "today's news today." In this connection, it is not amiss to state that it gets no news by wire, except what comes to it from Fairmont, if any, by telephone.

The attention of the numerous readers of the Telegram is called to the many columns of live advertising this paper enjoys. It is an indication that the business men of Clarksburg know a good advertising medium and that all the people read the Telegram. As the public knows the policy of the Telegram is to aid the city and county in their marvelous development, and the co-operation given by the people to the Telegram is gratefully appreciated.

One of the Democratic papers here admits that thousands of people marched across the continent under the last Democratic administration to besiege the government at Washington for relief from starvation. We thought we would bring them to that acknowledgment. It was such a notorious fact that they could not deny it, like they try to deny other things, when there is a possibility of the loop hole.

The Democratic paper here which is making war on Roosevelt because he has been making war on the trusts at last admits its reason for doing so, by telling its readers that Roosevelt has prosecuted the trusts. It is not to be blamed for doing what Dave Hill asks the Democratic party to do this year, since he has again assumed the leadership of the party, and does not want the trusts disturbed.

The little Democratic clique which is fixing it to dictate the nominees of its party in this county is on the run, as is evidenced by one of its official sheets. It has taken up the habit again of calling other people liars. They ought to indulge a little retrospection of themselves and their course and then hide themselves from ordinary sun light.

Clarksburg's great expansion is given another substantial testimonial in the coming of so many state meetings and conventions.

The Panama Hat

Is now supreme. It is one of the great wonders of the present time. The rapid progress the Panama Hat has made in popular favor in the last few years, is simply marvelous, and this year there are many more than ever being sold. Last season we bought them few at a time, but this year the growth of our business justified us in buying a whole gross at the start, and as we bought early it gave us special prices. You can quickly see that we are headquarters for this famous and popular hat which is the wonder of all hats.

You will always find us wide awake, looking after our business for good things with which to please the people. Many of these hats have been sold at fabulous prices. King Edward of England paid $400 for one last season; others have paid even more. This merely goes to prove that the Panama hat craze has spread far and wide. It is one of the most expensive fashions that has ever been adopted by men. But the multitude of people will have them. These hats are all made in South America. It is said that one half the people in Ecuador are engaged in making hat luxuries for the men of America. They are mostly made by women, as the men are too lazy to work, and are named Panama, because nearly all are shipped from Panama.

We are anxious to sell you a Panama Hat. Come and see us.
